

SDRME

Society of Directors of Research in Medical Education

Networking

We are a group of health professions education researchers responsible for education scholarship, curriculum development or evaluation at our institution. Representatives to SDRME have the opportunity to interact closely with others in similar education research roles. We offer opportunities for collaboration across the continuum of health sciences education.

Benefits to institutions and their representatives include Scholarship, Service, Advocacy and Legacy.

Scholarship

Striving and supporting excellence in the pursuit and dissemination of new knowledge in health professions education; and in the development, implementation, and evaluation of educational programs.

Service

Promoting the importance of research in health professions education through service to its member institutions and through development of individual researchers, institutions, and organizations.

Advocacy

Supporting and augmenting institutional representatives' efforts through collaboration, consultation, and collegiality.

Legacy

Since its inception in 1987, many leaders in health professions education scholarship have participated in SDRME. More than 50 U.S. institutions are members.

Membership

Institutions may join SDRME, recommending two representatives to the organization.

For more detailed information about SDRME, visit

www.sdrme.org